

The French monthly Bank Lending Survey • April 2018

Slight decrease in demand for loans to enterprises

Loans to enterprises: in April, banks reported a slight decrease in credit demand from enterprises.

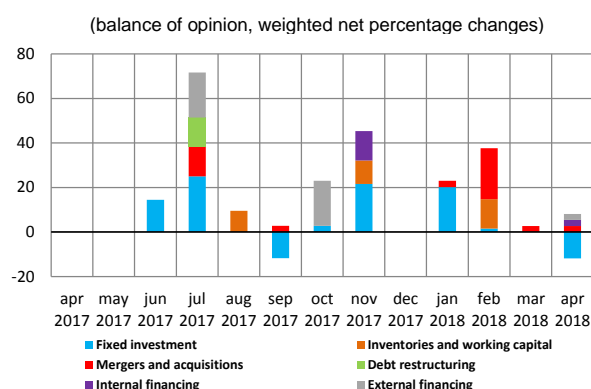

Loans to households: the banking surveyed reported a stable demand for housing and an increase for consumer credit.

Balances of opinions, calculated as weighted net percentages of responses, do not constitute a measure of the growth of credits actually distributed, nor of the actual evolution of margins.

Changes in net demand for loans to enterprises

Contributing factors to changes in SMEs

Changes in net demand for housing loans

Changes in net demand for consumer credit

Changes in households and enterprises' demand: banks' balances of opinion breakdown

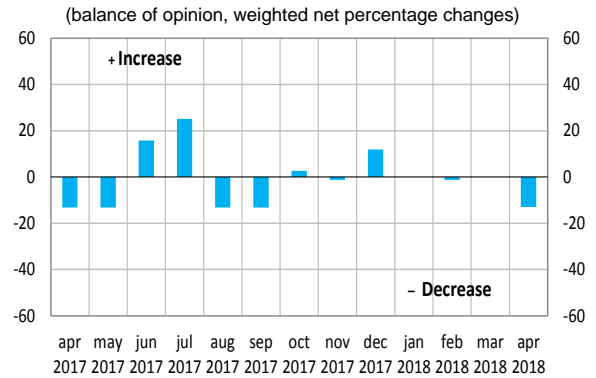

Additional information

Changes in corporate financing needs

Mergers/acquisitions and corporate restructuring

Fixed investment

NB: Banks' responses are weighted by the relative importance of credit (SMEs, large firms, households' house purchase, consumer credit) they distribute.

For loan demand, the balance of opinion is the difference between the percentage of banks in the sample reporting an increase and the percentage of those reporting a decrease.

For contributing factors to changes in demand (including corporate financing needs), the balance of opinion associated with a factor is the difference between the percentage of banks in the sample reporting the factor as having contributed to an increase in demand and the percentage of those reporting the factor as having contributed to a decrease in demand.

